MOUNT SHASTA

Where Skell Descended

SISKIYOU COUNTY · CALIFORNIA
CASCADE RANGE

THE INVITATION

Come Stand Beneath the Solitary Peak

There is no range to soften it. Mount Shasta stands almost alone above the northern California landscape, visible for a hundred miles in clear weather, snow-capped through every season, a single enormous volcanic form doing all the work that a whole mountain range does elsewhere.

Five distinct peoples — the Wintu, Karuk, Okwanuchu, Modoc, and Shastan — hold this mountain sacred, and have for longer than any written record reaches. It has served as a vision-quest site, a place for training medicine men and women, a place of healing. One telling holds that the spirit-chief Skell descended from heaven directly onto this summit.

Steam still rises from vents near Hotlum Cone. Hot springs still run warm on its slopes. This is not a dormant memory of a mountain. It is an active one.

THE LAND ITSELF

A Mountain Still Breathing

Mount Shasta rises 14,179 feet, a double-peaked stratovolcano and one of the largest of its kind on Earth, part of the thousand-mile Cascade Range running from northern California into British Columbia. Geologists place its beginnings roughly 593,000 years ago — young, as mountains go, and still growing.

It remains an active volcano, having erupted on average about once every 800 years over the last ten thousand. Fumaroles and hot springs persist on its slopes and near its summit, particularly around Hotlum Cone, fed by heat from the magma system still working beneath the rock.

It is recognized as an eligible Native American cultural and cosmological property on the National Register of Historic Places — a formal acknowledgment of what the Wintu, Karuk, Okwanuchu, Modoc, and Shastan peoples have held about this mountain for a very long time before any register existed to record it.

THE ORIENTATION

A Line Back to the Source

From the Sun Disc's ground in Arkansas, this Satellite sits to the west-northwest, in the Cascade Range of northern California.

Named in the primary source and confirmed by Peter's working diagram, Mount Shasta is also independently identified in the Nine Master Atlantean Crystal material as the Om Crystal, 9-9-9 — placing an esoteric correlation alongside a long, separately documented record of Indigenous sacred use.

WHAT THIS GROUND OFFERS

Beginning With What a Body Needs

WATER & BREATH

Glacier melt, active hot springs, and headwaters feeding rivers across the region.

GROUND & SHELTER

Volcanic stone and forested slopes rising from the valley floor to permanent snowfields.

FOOD & PROVISION

Forested slopes that have supported hunting and gathering for the peoples of this region across many generations.

WORK & CRAFT

A tradition of obsidian and stone tool craft, and geothermal warmth still active in the ground itself.

WHAT THIS GROUND OFFERS

Rising Toward What a Community Needs

KINSHIP & BELONGING

Five distinct peoples sharing one mountain's sacred status — a single ground, multiply held.

CHILDREN & LEARNING

The vision-quest tradition itself stands as a working model of how a people historically brought its young into adulthood, on this exact ground.

CULTURE & CEREMONY

Ongoing ceremonial use by multiple tribal nations, continuing into the present day.

REST & RENEWAL

Hot springs warmed by the mountain's own living heat.

VISION & CALLING

A summit visible for a hundred miles — and, in the Wintu and neighboring traditions, the very place a spirit-chief once chose to descend.

Two Lines Meeting on One Mountain

Mount Shasta carries an unusually well-documented sacred status in the historical and anthropological record itself — five separate peoples, a vision-quest tradition, and formal recognition on the National Register of Historic Places as a cultural and cosmological property. That record exists entirely independent of any esoteric teaching.

Separately, the Nine Master Atlantean Crystal material transmitted through Tyberonn and developed by Maia Nartoomid names this same mountain as the Om Crystal, 9-9-9 — one of nine great crystals said to have been carried from Atlantis at its fall. Two lines of testimony, one long-documented and one esoteric, arriving independently at the same solitary peak.

A RECEIVING POINT, NOT A DESTINATION

None of this replaces standing on the ground itself. A Satellite is not a monument and not a holiday stop — it is a place already at work, quietly, carrying what the Sun Disc radiates outward into the land and the people around it.

Whatever draws you here — the solitary scale of the mountain, the living warmth still rising from its slopes, or the two separate lines of testimony that meet on this one summit — the invitation is the same one this whole field of Satellites extends.

*Come see if it calls to you
the way it has called to everyone who has ever stood here and felt something larger listening back.*

FIELD NOTES

Specifications & Coordinates

Satellite 04 of the Arkansas Sun Disc · Siskiyou County, California, United States.

THE SUMMIT — MOUNT SHASTA

41.41° N, 122.19° W · Elevation 14,179 ft (4,322 m)

Double-peaked stratovolcano, Cascade Range; formation began approx. 593,000 years ago. Active fumaroles and hot springs near Hotlum Cone.

ESOTERIC CORRELATION

Identified in the Nine Master Atlantean Crystal material as the Om Crystal, 9-9-9, alongside independently documented sacred status held by the Wintu, Karuk, Okwanuchu, Modoc, and Shastan peoples.

REGIONAL ACCESS

City of Mount Shasta and Weed, Siskiyou County, northern California, along Interstate 5.
